

THE SOURCE

Andrea Picchioni 2017 Rosso d'Asia

Varietal(s)	90% Croatina, 10% Uhgetta
Region	Lombardy, Italy
Short Summary
Terroir	Oltrepò Pavese is located in the far southwestern corner of Lombardia, a sort of appendage that is scrunched between Piemonte and Emilia Romagna. The communes of Buttafuoco are located about 100 miles directly east of Torino and 40 miles south of Milano, within two valleys. Picchioni's steep vineyards are located in the Solinga Valley (Sun Valley), an amphitheater with an east end opening that holds in the sun's heat longer than other areas in the region. The result of the heat is stressed vines that render wines of strength and depth, with the shoulders and tannins provided by Croatina and the acidic drive and bright intensity from Barbera—together an extremely compelling pair. Picchioni's organically farmed Buttafuoco vineyards are steep and mostly face south and southwest and reach altitudes of up to 220 meters, prime for still red wines. The Solinga valley is full of wild, dense forest and this is felt and tasted in the nuances and energy of his wines.
Cellar Notes	Manually harvested and completely destemmed, it's vinified with natural yeasts in concrete vats. Sulfites are added prior to fermentation and then after malolactic fermentation; the SO2 level never exceeds 70mg/l (70 parts per million). The maceration on skins last more than two months, depending on the vintage.
Farming	Sustainable—Organic Certified—Biodynamic Certified—Uncertified Naturalist
Alcohol %	14-14.5%
Total SO2	None Added—Very Low—Low—Medium—High